INTRODUCTION.

I.

OF Wyclif's Dialogus, or Speculum Ecclesie Militantis, no less than ten manuscripts have come down to us, a greater number than of any other of his works. Of these ten manuscripts nine are in public libraries at Vienna and Prague, and for the most part bear plain traces that they were transcribed by Bohemian copyists. The only English manuscript extant is that in the collection of Lord Ashburnham, and from this, by the owner's kindness, the text of the present edition has been taken. Though Wyclif's immense influence in Bohemia is now well known, that the foreign transcripts in existence should outnumber the English by nine to one is at first sight startling. It is probably to be explained by the popular character of the Dialogus, especially in its early chapters, as compared with other of Wyclif's Latin works. In England this would not greatly increase its circulation, as nearly the whole of the work can be paralleled from the English writings. But in any foreign country it would naturally widen the circle of readers, and the use which Dr. Loserth has made of the Dialogus, in proving the debt of Hus to Wyclif, helps to show that the large number of the Bohemian transcripts in existence is not merely the result of accident¹.

As the name by which it is generally known informs us, the Speculum Ecclesie Militantis is written in the form of a dialogue. Later on, in the Trialogus, Wyclif was to show that he had attained at least a moderate mastery over the difficulties of this kind of composition, but the Dialogus was his first essay in it, and from a literary point of view is open to some criticism. The persons of the dialogue are Veritas and Mendacium, and at the outset we are told (on the authority of John xiv. 6, and viii. 44) that the first of these stands for Christ, and the second for the Devil. In the first three chapters some attempt is made to adhere to this characterization, and we have such sentences as 'Cum ego sim deus conditor cuiuslibet creature', 'ordinavi illis regulas vivendi', 'feci illam scribi in duplice testamento', though side by side with them are others in which Christ is spoken of in the third person. After Chapter 3 Veritas is Wyclif, and Wyclif only, and we have him frequently professing the purity of his motives and his readiness to confront the Pope, or to endure persecution for the truth. As to Mendacium, there is no attempt at characterization whatever. He is only a rather simple upholder of existing abuses, and is content to use such very Wyclifite language as ut patet de heresi in eucharistia et aliis similibus que in fine temporum diabolus spissius seminavit. A further literary defect may be noted in the length at which Veritas sometimes soliloquizes. His opening statement occupies fourteen pages, and though Mendacium is allowed in all twenty short paragraphs, the last three speeches by Veritas fill respectively nine, four, and eleven pages¹.

The Dialogus does not lend itself very easily to division into sections, but we may group its thirty-six chapters under five fairly distinct heads. Thus 1-10 contain the case against endowments as stated from Scripture, and in 11-23 we have the defence of Veritas to successive appeals by Mendacium to Church authority. Worsted on the theory of the question, Mendacium then falls back on the practical difficulties in the way of dis-endowment, and the consideration of these occupies Chapters 24-33. Finally in 34-36 Veritas briefly shows the part which each order of the Church has to play, traces the history of endowment, and points out the advantages to be gained by its abolition. In the Epilogus, which is scholastic in form, new arguments are added, with a recapitulation of some of the most important points previously made.

As an introduction to his arguments, Veritas briefly describes the division of the Church Militant into the three orders of Clerus, Domini Temporales, and Vulgares, and explains their several functions and relations. In three successive chapters the proof from the Old Testament is then unfolded, which here, as in the very early English tract The Clergy may not hold Property, and the very late Supplementum Trialogi, is mainly based on the three texts, Numbers xviii. 20, Deuteronomy xviii. 1, and Ezekiel xlivi. 28. In the following two chapters it is shown that this teaching is confirmed by that of Christ, and also of Solomon, Peter and Paul.

In Chapter 8 Mendacium makes his first reply. It is true, he says, that Christ preached poverty, but He did not intend it to be a permanent law. The glory of the priesthood requires the support of endowments; these are held in the name of Christ as 'patrimonium crucifixi,' and are sanctioned by the concessions of temporal lords and the approbation of the Pope. Is Christ's law to pass away, Antichrist's to endure? Veritas answers. The so-called 'glory' of the priesthood is their shame; to say that they hold their estates in the name of Christ is a blasphemous attempt to shift their sin upon Him. Christ is the 'dominus capitalis,' without whose consent no concessions of His tenants, the temporal lords, can hold good ; and the example of popes goes for nothing unless founded on reason and Scripture. The only course for the clergy is contrition and restitution.

Already Mendacium has shown a disposition to avoid the test of Scripture, and he now begins a series of what I have roughly called appeals to Church authority. His main position is that endowments are supported by the lives of the saints, but when Veritas sets up against this the doctrine that the Scripture alone is binding, papal bulls, indulgences and letters of bishops and of fraternity are innocently presented for demolition, on the ground that they rest on an authority distinct from Scripture. In Chapter 14 the example of the saints is recurred to, and Mendacium demands reverence for their authority because prayers are addressed to them. In answer to this Veritas, who has previously distinguished carefully between Faith and Opinion, now points out that it is only the Apostles whose sanctity is a matter of faith, and that though prayers to saints are good in so far as they serve to quicken devotion to Christ, they often do harm, and would be better addressed directly to God. This Mendacium considers as a failure of reverence to men whose sanctity has been approved by canonization and miracles, and Veritas is thus given an excuse for attacking more abuses, while the further objections of Mendacium that disendowment would lessen the numbers of the clergy, and that prelates who rank as great nobles are peculiarly serviceable to the Church, lead up to denunciations of simony and of the worldly character of the priesthood.

We have now reached Chapter 19, and this and the four chapters which follow it are directed against the friars and monks, and the doctrine of the superior efficacy of the prayers by the sale of which the vast revenues of the monasteries were mainly obtained. Mendacium introduces the subject by the objection that, if endowments are bad, confessors, and therefore especially the friars, must be traitors and heretics for concealing the fact from their penitents, a conclusion so outrageous as to make the supposition inadmissible. In his reply Veritas deals first with the friars, and it is worthy of note that here his language is most carefully measured. The friars, he says, must make their own defence, only they cannot be excused for choosing the unendowed life for themselves, as the more perfect, and yet approving of endowments in the case of others. Their duplicity, however, cannot shake the authority of Scripture, from which all that is good in their order is derived. Were the order only stripped of its unscriptural accretions, what remained would be the pure and meritorious sect of Christ. This mention of the sect of Christ is construed by Mendacium as an attack on all other sects, and, taking up the challenge, in Chapter 20 Veritas proceeds to prove its superiority to them all. On this follows an argument against the splendour, and even the existence, of monastic buildings, and when Mendacium objects that, if monks be done away with, their prayers will be lost to the Church, the bitterness of the attack increases, and the fraudulent and simoniacal nature of the bargainings about prayers is fully exposed. An accusation of fatalism is answered by an exposition of the true doctrine of the efficacy of prayer, and it is predicted that the illgotten wealth of the clergy will bring down on them the curse pronounced against those who offer to God of what they have defrauded the poor.

Mendacium now takes a slightly different line. Hitherto he has adduced the existing practice and constitution of the Church as an authority by which endowments are defended, he now objects that the withdrawal of the endowments would involve the overthrow of the constitution. This Veritas is prepared to view with equanimity, and in Chapters 24–26 he argues that, if it is as Mendacium says, it would be good for the Church to have neither pope (whose function of granting indulgences might very well be dispensed with) nor cardinals, while the bishops should be prohibited from exercising their special powers for gain. The clergy may betake themselves to teaching or transcribing for their living, though there would be no harm in their agreeing to take a small yearly salary, and sick or disabled parish priests would have a right to alms. Lastly, despite the good they may accidentally do, the disappearance of Universities would be no loss to the Church, and all monks should freely cast off their bonds and enter the sect of Christ. Such is the scheme of Church reform proposed by Veritas, and he claims for it the sanction and approbation of Christ.

Mendacium threatens excommunication, only to be answered that excommunication by Antichrist will win blessing from Christ, and he falls back on the argument that, if alms may be given for a certain length of time, there can be no reason why they should not be given in perpetuity. Veritas points out that this would prove that because fishes can live out of water a certain length of time therefore they can live so for ever, and adds the further objection that the endowment of cloisters in perpetuity has no right to the name of alms. He continues to press this point in answer to a proposal by Mendacium that the temporal lords should year by year keep up the grants of rents made by their ancestors, and thus the clergy, without holding ownership, have the fruits for distribution among the poor. The clergy would lose their much-prized title to endowment, and the lords be reduced to the position of rent-gatherers, and yet, after all, the alms would be no true alms. No analogy from the supposed fact that it was the apostles who distributed the fragments left from the miracle of the loaves can justify perpetual endowments, and the example of the apostles after Christ's death tells, not for, but against the distribution of alms by the clergy. Lords should find their own almoners and not burden the clergy with a trust in which they have already been found so unfaithful as to justify the confiscation of their property. Let the king obey Christ and confiscate their goods, and the clergy show cause against it if they can!

We have now to deal with Chapters 31–33, and before continuing our summary it must be premised that the manuscripts about this point have become very confusing. In the Ashburnham Manuscript, Chapter 28 is followed by Chapter 33, with a note that some chapters are wanting. At the end of the manuscript these are supplied, with the exception of the greater part of Chapter 30, the leaf containing which appears to have been lost. In the other manuscripts Chapter 31 is omitted altogether, and that which in the text is numbered 32 forms the first part of the Epilogus. More will be said on this subject later on; for the present it is enough to note that the arrangement in the text is by no means free from doubt.

To the bold demand of Veritas for the confiscation of clerical property, Mendacium replies that the secular arm is not strong enough to enforce such a measure, and the pope is sworn to oppose it. Nay more, the pope has the power of conferring kingdoms, and it is rather the clergy who should disendow the secular lords than the secular lords who should disendow the clergy. Against such a view of the relation of the two orders Veritas vigorously protests, and he has no difficulty in pointing out the absurdity of the conclusions which might be drawn from it. He has hopes that the clergy, if forced to face the question, would themselves declare against endowment, and in any case the king of England should refuse to make any fresh grants to them and should follow such precedents as the denial of tribute to the pope.

Mendacium now advances his last objections. In the first place, he says, glebe and church are inseparable; secondly, if the clergy surrender any part of their income they must surrender the whole, glebe, tithes and offerings as well as endowments. But really there is no need for anything of the kind, as it is not the individual ecclesiastic who holds lordship, but the church as a whole. Veritas easily shows that the connection of glebe and church is purely arbitrary, and applies himself to the question of restitution. This, he says, is owed to God and not to the secular lord, who has no claim either by God's law or man's. But it is not the fact of holding property so much as the manner of it which is to be attacked. A good curate may keep his glebe, or receive moderate offerings and tithes, so he be faithful in work and free from avarice. As to the theory that lordship rests with the church, it is an imperfection even in the second order, and is so plainly forbidden to the clergy that their acceptance of it ranks them under the banners of Antichrist. Preceded by a scholastic explanation of the nature of buying and selling, an attack is now made upon the simony of the clergy, and the destructive part of the treatise comes to an end. Of the three chapters which follow, the first is devoted to an exposition of the manner in which each of the three orders can and ought to come to the rescue of the church. All must help with their prayers, and the clergy must stir the temporal lords to restrain the enemies of the church and withdraw from them the misnamed alms. A sketch of the gradual rise of the system of endowment and of the doctrine of the necessary preponderance of popes and bishops then follows, and their insidious advance is ascribed to the devil. Lastly, we have a bitterly ironical chapter in which the lords are bidden to inform the clergy that they will not be damned for their sake, and the clergy are reminded that if the lords have borne the burden of the present system for a thousand years, it can be no hardship to themselves to revert for some seven years to Christ's law, so that both may be tried. By this all three orders would be benefited ; the clergy by being brought under Christ's rule, the lords by being relieved from the need of oppressing their tenants so as to give to monks, the labourers by having better masters. And so, with a fervent wish that all three orders of the church may rally to the truth, the Dialogus is brought to an end. Of the Epilogue by which it is followed, it is needless to give any full account. As has been already said, it is scholastic in form, and we have first three chief arguments in favour of endowment with their appropriate refutations, then two others, and then a final four. The reasoning is very close, and does not admit of a shorter treatment than that given in the marginal analysis.

II.

For reasons that will be apparent as we proceed, the question of the date of the Dialogus is of peculiar interest. In endeavouring to fix this date two kinds of evidence must be considered ; (1) references to current events, (2) the place which the treatise holds in the development of Wyclif's teaching. The first is capable of yielding the most precise and the most certain results, so long as we are careful not to see references where they do not really exist ; the second is of great importance, but (especially while so many of Wyclif's works remain inaccessible) is very difficult of interpretation.

1377. Wyclif before Courtenay, Feb. 19.—Gregory XI's five bulls containing a conditional citation of Wyclif, dated May 31; alluded to in Parliament, October; published, December 18.—Death of Edward III, June 21.

1378. Wyclif before Sudbury, Feb. or March.—Death of Gregory XI, March 27.—Protests of Cardinals against Urban's election, July—the subject before the English Parliament, October.—Clement VII elected Anti-Pope, Sept. 20.—Urban's Bull against Clement, Nov. 29.—To this year is usually assigned the beginning of the activity of Wyclif's 'Poor Priests.'

1381. Peasants' Revolt, June.—To the Summer Term of this year is assigned the publication of Wyclif's twelve Theses against Transubstantiation.

current events, we have first an important piece of negative evidence. Few events stirred Wyclif more deeply than Bishop Spencer's crusade in Flanders, and his allusions to it in his latest writings are so frequent that it is impossible to believe that, in a work of the length of the Dialogus, it would have been unnoticed had it occurred. This is the more certain because the bearing of arms by the clergy is actually mentioned in Chapter 4 (p. 8, l. 6), where a reference to the crusade would have been very apposite. In the absence of such reference we may safely conclude that our treatise was composed not later than 1382. Was it composed in 1382? This date is supported by the great authority of Dr. Lechler¹, and it has in its favour a passage at the end of Chapter 5, where, after speaking of the increase of simony, Veritas proceeds: Per hoc autem inhabiles aspirant ad superiores gradus sacerdotii et impediunt verbum dei predicari in populo, et anhelantes ad illud tanquam hereticos persecuntur: et ista persecucio est heresis sue manifestum indicium; nec sufficiunt pauperes et pauci fideles sacerdotes resistere, nisi deus per seculare brachium vel aliunde cicius manus apposuerit adjutrices (p. 10, l. 23 sqq.). At first sight this appears to be a clear reference to the appointment of Wyclif's old enemy, Courtenay, to be Archbishop of Canterbury, and to those measures against the 'Poor Priests' which were almost his first official acts. Anyone who holds that the date 1382 is plausible on other grounds has a right to regard this passage as a strong confirmation of his view: it must, however, be remarked (1) that there is no ground for asserting that the new Archbishop was inhabilis, though, according to Wyclif's teaching, the pressure which his noble kinsmen may have brought to bear may have made the appointment simoniacial; (2) that in the Latin tract De Dæmonio Meridiano, which, from its style and appearance of having been written soon after the death of the Black Prince (June 8, 1376) cannot, I think, be placed later than early in 1377, there is an equally distinct reference to the opposition to faithful preachers. If this be so, Wyclif's 'Poor Priests' must have both begun their work, and met with resistance much earlier than is supposed, and the reference in our text may be to some previous persecution of them¹.

1382. Archbishop Courtenay receives the Pallium, May 6.—Earthquake Council, May 21.—Edict against Poor Priests, May 26.—Attack on Wyclites at Oxford, May—November.—Bull for the crusade against Clement communicated to Parliament, November.—The translation of the Bible was probably completed this year.

1383. Bishop Spencer's Crusade in Flanders, May—October.

Our next date-passage is a probable reference to the death of Gregory XI in March, 1378. In Chapter 24 Mendacium had thrown out the taunt, Qualiter cunque hic loquaris in angulis non auderes ista defendere vel dicere coram papa, and Veritas had answered him, Confisus in fide audeo hec dicere coram deo. Et si mortem temporalem adhuc timeo, sicut petrus, reputo quod debeo istam sentenciam defendere coram papa. In Chapter 29 Mendacium launches a more distinct threat in the words ista defendens citaberis, excommunicaberis, et ab omni fructu in ecclesia utili suspenderis, to which Veritas makes answer, Si antichristus citat hominem ad locum quem non intelligit, nec scit si pro tempore citationis erit in tartaris cum diabolo stabilitus, et Christus citat per legem suam, per instinctum et casus quos immittit ad partem contrariam, quis dubitat quin citacioni domini est parendum? In excusing himself in 1384 from obedience to a citation of Urban VI, Wyclif was to use language very similar to this, but here it is difficult not to see a reference to his conditional citation in the bulls of May, 1377, which the death of Gregory XI in the following March rendered inoperative.

One more reference to current events remains for consideration, and that the most important. It occurs in Chapter 11, and is an unmistakable allusion to the papal schism which was plotted in July, 1378, and consummated by the election of Clement VII as anti-Pope on the twentieth of the following September. Veritas has been speaking of the too great reverence paid to papal decisions, and adds, as an example of the popular folly, Et si duo pape ex seminacione sathanæ electi fuerint, populi diversi elecciones illas approbant tanquam fidem. Et ex tali scismate oriri possent inconveniencia infinita. The allusion is made the more pointed by the attack which follows on the method of election by cardinals instead of by lot, for the ground on which it was sought to invalidate the election of Urban was that the cardinals had been so intimidated by the clamour of the populace for a Roman pope, that they had made their choice against the guiding of the Holy Spirit. It is unfortunate that a passage of so much importance is not altogether free from difficulties of interpretation. If the reading possent is right, and the tense is to be pressed, it might be held to point to a date such as September, 1378, when the subject was already under discussion, but the news of the election of Clement had not yet reached England. It is more probable, however, that we ought to read possunt, especially as the words populi diversi elecciones illas approbant tanquam fidem would be more forcible after than before the recognition of Clement by the University of Paris, which did not take place till the spring of 1379.

Again the words ex seminacione sathane may be taken either with electi fuerint (= if by Satan's sowing two popes are elected), or with duo pape (= two popes of the seed of Satan), and the latter rendering points to a later date than the former, as it was not until some time after the bull of Nov. 1378, in which Urban excommunicated and declared war on his rival, that Wyclif lost all faith in him. In any case, however, the words oriri possent inconveniencia multa are so, almost ludicrously, inadequate to describe the effects of the schism that I think they must have been written when these effects had only begun to unfold themselves, i. e. some time in 1379.

Independently of its bearing on the date, the stage in the development of his opinions which Wyclif had reached in the Dialogus would naturally engage our attention. What does the Dialogus teach as to (1) the constitution of the Church, (2) the Friars, (3) the doctrine of Eucharist, are the points we have to consider, and we will take them in order. Dr. Buddensieg has pointed out¹ that, even in his latest works, 'Wyclif in no passage goes so far as downright and without modification to identify the Pope with Antichrist or the Devil . . . The Pope is Antichrist only in so far as he does or leaves undone this or that.' In this way, in Chapter 31, he is called Antichrist's vicar rather than Christ's, because of his encroachments on the temporal power (p. 73, l. 7), and in Chapter 7 his temporal possessions are said to make him an 'obstinate heretic' (p. 14, l. 4). In the same strain it is said that the name is unknown to Scripture, and that it might be good for the church to be without a Pope (p. 49), while the theory that he excels all other priests is traced to the interference of Constantine (pp. 82, 83). All this is stronger than we have in any work previous to 1378, and appears to belong to the beginning of the second of the three stages which Dr. Lechler has traced in Wyclif's teaching as to the constitution of the Church. The same, I think, may be said of what we find written on other points. Thus an attack is made on the exercise for gain of the three distinctively episcopal functions of confirmation, ordination, and consecration of places (p. 50, l. 19), but it is not yet suggested that these can be exercised by any priest. Again, as to the endowment of the Church, the main subject of the treatise. Wyclif here teaches that all property held in direct ownership must be surrendered, but though his arguments tend in the direction of the abolition of tithes, his language on the subject is not so decided as in later works. That he attacks the monastic system with bitterness helps as nothing, for this was part of his earliest teaching, and his virulence on this point is in strong contrast with the comparatively moderate language about the Friars which we have next to consider. As to this it must be noted that the theory that Wyclif was friendly to the Mendicant Orders till the end of 1381 has been decisively disproved by Mr. Matthew. In the tract De Officio Pastorali (which both in its Latin and English versions alludes to Avignon as the residence of the Pope, which it had ceased to be after Gregory XI's triumphant entry into Rome in 1377) Wyclif is already using strong expressions against the Friars. Indeed, if it were not that he seems, until quite the end of his life, to have been much more moderate on this subject in his Latin than in his English writings, it would be difficult to explain how his language in the Dialogus is as temperate as it actually is. At the end of Chapter 30, and in a few other places, we have single passages more or less strongly condemnatory of them¹, but, as I have already observed, Chapter 19, of which they form the subject, is remarkable for the moderation of its language. This chapter, taken with the reference to them on p. 85, as likely to support the duty of poverty, suggests that the Dialogus was written at a time when Wyclif was already strongly moved by the abuses which had crept into the Mendicant Orders, but had not yet abandoned all hope that they would range themselves on his side.

It remains for us to consider those references to the Doctrine of the Holy Eucharist which invest the date of the Dialogus with its chief importance. According to the passage in the Fasciculi Zizaniorum, sub anno Domini MCCCLXXXI, *in æstate*¹ Wyclif set forth at Oxford twelve theses on the subject of Transubstantiation, and it has been generally assumed that the publication of these theses marks the date of his first opposition to the existing doctrine of the Catholic Church. That doctrine, as I understand it, was, and is, that by the act of Consecration the substance of the bread is changed into the substance of Christ's Body, but that the accidents of the bread, such as its colour, taste, etc., remain unchanged, as our eyes and palate assure us. In opposition to this Wyclif taught that, as accidents cannot exist without a substance, and the accidents after Consecration are plainly not the accidents of Christ's Body, which is in Heaven, the substance of the bread must remain. The result, therefore, of Consecration is not material, but spiritual, and the Host, although at every point in it verily and indeed Christ's Body, remains bread as to its substance as well as in its accidents. Besides two unimportant references on p. 32, l. 2, and p. 53, l. 19, the passages which relate to this subject are the following : (1) On p. 28, ll. 4 sqq. Veritas in arguing against the introduction of legends into the Church, uses as an example: cum in festo corporis Christi de sancto sacerdotum scribitur quod accidencia sunt in eucharistia sine subjecto, quod non fuit fides tempore augustini. (2) On p. 54, ll. 17 sqq. Veritas, after speaking of scholastic studies as fruitful of heresies, again takes as his example: Ut que securitas est in istis defendendo quod hostia consecrata non sit corpus domini sed accidens incognitum sine subjecto, ut reserant nove secte? (3) On p. 70, ll. 25 sqq. he actually is already proposing that this question should be made a test one, and that the priests and friars, on pain of outlawry, shall declare regi et regno, ex efficaci autoritate scripture vel ratione, quid in natura sua sit ipsa hostia consecrata. These passages make it clear that at the time the Dialogus was written, Wyclif was already in the final stage of his opinion on the subject of Transubstantiation, though the form in which they are cast leaves it open to us to hold that he had not yet formulated his doctrine with the precision with which it is presented in the twelve theses. That he should have promulgated those theses without any previous discussion or warning appears antecedently improbable, and Mr. Matthew, in the Introduction to his 'Unprinted English Works of Wyclif' (pp. xx–xxiv), has already shown that there is no yawning chasm between these theses and Wyclif's teaching as early as 1367. The date which, in that Introduction, Mr. Matthew assigned to Wyclif's first public maintenance of his final view of the Eucharist is 1380, but I have his authority for saying that he now considers it 'most probable that Wyclif's final views on this subject were formed by 1379.'

Thus from an examination of its references to current events, and of its place in the development in Wyclif's doctrines, the Dialogus appears to have been written in the course of the year 1379. This date is further confirmed by the strong resemblance which our treatise bears to the De Papa which Mr. Matthew has assigned to 1380. On every other point the language of the De Papa is almost identical with that of the Dialogus, but on the schism, the doctrine of the Eucharist and the uselessness of Universities¹ it is more pronounced, thus indicating that some such interval as a year must have elapsed between the two works. While, however, I thus tentatively put forth the year 1379 as the probable date of the Dialogus, I feel most strongly that until all Wyclif's works are in our hands no final decision is possible, and if I have treated the subject at some length it has been much more with a view of furnishing to riper scholars than myself the materials for consideration than from a desire to force my own opinion on my readers.

III.

Of the ten extant manuscripts of the Dialogus nine have been examined for this edition. The estimated expense of collating the tenth, which is at Prague, was unfortunately too great for the Wyclif Society to be justified in incurring it. For the description of the eight Vienna MSS. I am indebted to notes supplied by Dr. Herzberg-Fränel, by whom the collations of the text have been made. The manuscripts are as follows:—

i. Ashburnham xxvii. c. ff. 97–116 and 118–121.

On vellum, about $6\frac{3}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$, written legibly, but without any attempt at adornment, in a charter hand of the Fifteenth century. The copyist has gone through his work and corrected it. The MS. has 121 leaves and contains three English Tracts and eleven in Latin, including a fly-sheet on the mystical sense of Castellum on f. 117. The Dialogus occupies leaves 97–116, and 118–121. The last four leaves contain Chapters 29, a few lines of 30, and 31 and 32, as to which there is a note of omission between Chapters 28 and 33 (f. 114 b). This MS. does not contain the Epilogus, and wants the greater part of Chapter 30, but it gives Chapter 31, which is wanting in all the Vienna MSS.

2. Vienna, 1338. ff. 55 a-81 b. Cited as D.

On Parchment. 2 columns to the page, 4to. Handwriting of the beginning of the 15th century, and clear. Initials illuminated. With catchwords in various hands, and a few glosses. Heading, Incipit Dialogus. The Text divided into 22 chapters, omitting our Chapters 31 and 32. The Epilogus, preceded by Chapter 32, as an Appendix headed Secuntur Capitula abstracta per falsos fratres a dyalogo, que communiter non habentur. Without Wyclif's name. Fully described by Dr. Buddensieg. (Wyclif's Polemical Works, I. xlvi.)

3. Vienna, 1387. ff. 150 a-164 d. Cited as B'.

On Parchment. 2 columns to the page, folio. Handwriting of about 1400. Initials illuminated. With catchwords and, in another hand, glosses, but of no interest. Heading, Dialogi Cap. 1^m. In the numeration of the chapters, Chapter 9 begins with the reply of Veritas in our Chapter 8, so that our 9-30 are numbered 10-31. Chapter 31, omitted. Chapter 32, part of the Appendix. Chapters 33-36, as in our text. The Appendix as in 1338, but without heading. With Wyclif's name at the end of the text, but not of the Appendix.

Fully described by Dr. Buddensieg. (Wyclif's Polemical Works, I. xl ix.)

4. Vienna, 1622. ff. 133 a-157 b.

On fine Parchment. 4to. Handwriting of the beginning of the 15th century. Beautifully written, but without heading, initial letters, chapter-numbers, catchwords, or glosses. Chapter 31 omitted. Without the Appendix. In the two lists of contents (on the inside of the leather and parchment covers respectively) this tract is enumerated as Dyalogus W. and Dyalogus Wykleph.

5. Vienna, 3930. ff. 1-20. Cited as B.

On paper. 2 columns to the page. Folio. Date of writing, 1412, of correction, 1414. Initials illuminated. With catchwords, but no glosses. Heading, Dialogus. The Chapters mostly unnumbered. Without the Appendix, but the contents otherwise as in 1387.

Very fully described by Dr. Buddensieg. (Wyclif's Polemical Works, I. xxxvii.)

6. Vienna, 4302. ff. 25-50 a.

On paper. 4to. Handwriting of the first half of the 15th century. With catchwords and glosses, but without Heading or Chapter-numbers. Contents as in 3930. Ends Explicit dyalogus Mgrī Ihns de anglia; qui vocatur Wicleph.

7. Vienna, 4505. ff. 1-29. Cited as C.

On paper. 4to. Handwriting of the first half of the 15th century. With catchwords resembling those of 3930, and with the glosses of 4302, but placed in the text and supplemented by others, some of which are in Bohemian. Contents (including the Appendix) as in 1387. At the end: et sic est finis tractatuli M. Io. W. scilicet dyalogus. Explicit dyalogus editus a reverendo magistro Io. de Wy. sacre theologie professore doctoreque ewangelico nacionis anglicane. On this follows a gloss on Chapter 1, and a now defaced inscription, Scribit Weñ . . . wecz Sebastiano Amico S. dilecto.

8. Vienna, 4515. ff. 1-25 a.

On paper. 4to. Handwriting of the first half of the 15th century. With catchwords, and with the same glosses as 4505, but expressed more shortly. Contents as in 3930. At the end: Explicit dyalogus editus a reverendo Mgrō Ioñē de Wyklef sacre theologie professore doctorisque evangelici Anglicana nacione, followed by the same gloss as in 3930. The glosses are in a different hand from the text, and the colophon in yet a third hand.

Fully described by Dr. Buddensieg. (Wyclif's Polemical Works, I. xlvi.)

9. Vienna, 4536. ff. 336-67a.

On paper. 4to. Handwriting of the first half of the 15th century. Initials in red. With catchwords, also glosses, both in the text and on the margin. Contents as in 3930. At end the word Pliaczka, then in another hand the same colophon and gloss as in 4505 and 4515, but with the name written Wlikeff. At the end of the Gloss: A nakonczy Palicka przekiel.

According to Dr. Herzberg-Fränel the relations of these MSS. are as follows. The Ashburnham MS. stands by itself, with important differences from all the others. The eight Vienna MSS. fall into two head-groups, of which the first comprises 3930 and 1387, and the second the other six. This second group may be further subdivided into two groups, each of three manuscripts. To the first sub-group belong 1622, 1338, and 4302; to the second 4515, 4536, and 4505. The Vienna manuscript which approaches most nearly to the Ashburnham is 3930, but this has been corrected in another hand from one of the manuscripts of the 4505 sub-group. Half-way between this sub-group and the Ashburnham stands 1387, but more nearly related to the former.

The text of the present edition is taken from Lord Ashburnham's manuscript, transcribed some years ago by Mr. Matthew, and collated by myself. For the portion of Chapter 30 omitted in this manuscript, and for the Epilogus, the text is taken from 1387, transcribed for this edition by Dr. Herzberg-Fränel. Dr. Herzberg-Fränel has also supplied the materials for the collation of our text with those of 3930, 1387, 4505, and in the Epilogus, 1338. As regards these manuscripts I have to express my regret for having thoughtlessly relettered them in the order of their relation to the Ashburnham manuscript, instead of having adopted the letters used for them by Dr. Budensieg in his edition of the Latin Polemical Works. As to the principle on which I have printed the text, I am glad to say that I found the Ashburnham manuscript so good that I felt justified in printing it exactly as it stands, with the exception that in some three or four places letters which had accidentally been omitted have been inserted within brackets. On the other hand where the text has been taken from 1387 I have sometimes felt obliged to adopt the reading of one of the collated MSS. and relegate that of 1387 to a note.

As to the collations, in order to enable readers to see for themselves the exact value of the three manuscripts, for Chapters 1-7 I have printed every variation, however minute, except of course mere differences of spelling. As, however, the printing of petty variations has the effect of obscuring important ones, from Chapter 8 onward I have rejected such as seemed utterly worthless. But I believe that I have given, without exception, every variation in which the three collated manuscripts agreed, and, with very few exceptions, all of those which are given by any two of them.

It remains to refer briefly to the question of the place of Chapters 31 and 32, and generally of the arrangement of the latter part of our treatise. Chapter 31 is found only in the Ashburnham manuscript, the chapter numbered in the text 32 only in that and in three out of the eight Vienna MSS. The place of this latter chapter, where it does occur, is sufficiently singular, for in the Vienna MSS. it comes between Chapter 36 and the Epilogus, from which it does not appear to be in any way marked off. In the Ashburnham MS. I for a long time persuaded myself that the second digit was so faint that it might be a 2. I have now, however, no doubt that it is really a 7. Thus in this manuscript also the chapter appears as a kind of appendix. The justification for assigning it a place between our Chapters 31 and 33 lies in the fact that both in the Ashburnham MS. and in 1387 a place for a chapter is vacant, and that there appears no other way of filling it in the Ashburnham.

while in 1387 it is more likely that the lacuna should be supplied from the Appendix than by Chapter 31, of which none of the Viennese MSS. have any trace whatever. It is remarkable, however, how many difficulties the last thirty pages of the Dialogus present compared with the smoothness of what has gone before. We have first one chapter which only exists in a single manuscript; then another which is only given by four out of nine, and the place of which in these four is quite unexplainable; then a total abandonment of the Dialogue form; lastly, an Epilogus which is not, as it professes to be, merely a summary of the preceding arguments, but a fresh treatment of the subject, though on similar lines. Is it possible that there were two editions of the Dialogus, of which the first may be represented by the Vienna MSS. which have no Appendix, while the second contained new chapters not very artistically dovetailed into the earlier text? Such an hypothesis may perhaps compete with that of the scribe of 1338, who attributes the usual omission of the Appendix to the work of 'false brothers.'

In preparing this edition of the Dialogus I have incurred heavy debts of gratitude to several kind helpers. I would again allude to the great courtesy of the Earl of Ashburnham in allowing me the use of his manuscripts to correct proofs with, after it had already been transcribed. To Mr. R. L. Poole I owe my thanks for advice on the verifying of quotations, a field in which the best I could do compares but poorly with his own untiring energy. To Dr. Furnivall I am grateful for much cheery encouragement, and the most considerate patience with a very slow editor. But the debt which I am least able adequately to acknowledge is that with which Mr. F. D. Matthew has burdened me by his most generously given help, in pointing out errors of the press, in suggesting improvements in the analysis, and in aiding me with his most carefully considered advice on all the many occasions on which I have asked it. I am far from satisfied with the way in which I have been able to edit this treatise, but that I can send it forth with any confidence at all is chiefly due to Mr. Matthew.

tam dure reprobavit hoc peccatum in sacerdotibus legis veteris, quomodo sacerdotem legis gracie nove movet redire ad dictam avariciam sicut canis reddit ad vomitum? Jam enim plus ditantur et gloriantur in seculo clerici et precipui sacerdotes quam ditabantur vel gloriabantur in seculo scribe 5 pharisei vel principes sacerdotum. Ideo, cum tanta sit racio perpetuacionis hujus legis Christi ut patet de statu innocencie et statu glorie, patet quod ista lex Christi debet precipue in novissimis temporibus observari; tunc enim diabolus plus temptat homines ad avariciam. Ideo est magis necessarium 10 in clero, qui debet esse speculum populi, apponere medicinam. And the argument imputes ignorance to Christ.

Even worse is the blasphemy in speaking of the 'patrimony of Christ crucified.'

For this shifts upon Christ the blame of the clergy's sin.

Et quantum ad nominacionem patrimonii crucifixi, patet quod multiplicas blasphemias contra clerum; quia 5 magnum peccatum est prevaricari sic in mandatum domini, sed major * blasfemia est imponere Christo quod ipse C. 5 b. approbat et necessitat clericos sic peccare. Sic enim, tanquam alter adam, nititur clerus suam culpam in dominum retorquere: mulier inquit, quam dedisti michi sociam dedit Gen. iii. 12. michi de ligno et comedi ut patet gen 3°. Clerus autem mentitur innuitive longe abjectius cum dicat quod Christus in ligno fuerat crucifixus ut clerus suus postmodum taliter dominetur. Sed que major blasfemia quam Christo imponere talem culpam? Et per consequens est summa 15 blasfemia quod clerus Christi virtute hujus passionis pauperis et humilis debet sic toto seculo dominari. The sanctity of saints is to be believed or not according to the evidence. Their legends are not of faith.

Just as the existence of accidents without a substance in the Eucharist is a doctrinal accretion.

So are many of these legends.

It is enough to believe tentatively in prayers to saints, absolutely in Christ.

Explicit (or specific) differs from implicit (or indefinite) faith.

We must believe in the resurrection of the body, but not separately in that of this or that man's body.

Quomodo ergo non erubesceret quis gratis accipiens istum statum, et post acceptum degenerans ab eodem, nam in hoc facheret se servum * diaboli et peccati.

Et ista est servitus maxima, servitute seculi plus horrenda. Et sic magnates, nitentes cognatos suos in dignitatibus magnis preficere, propter honores mundanos et lucrum seculi in seipsis, primo degenerant a domino jhu Christo, quia videntur esse socii furum et fautores hereticorum; quod est contra facta et verba domini, ut patet Mat. 20 de filiis zebdei.

Conceditur ergo quod nobilitas generis in prelatis potest esse tam in ipsis quam ecclesia occasio multi boni, sicut et potest esse occasio multi mali, specialiter si virtutum nobilitas non jungatur. Ideo Christus prudens medicus eligendo suos

Sic ergo prelatorum divicie atque nobilitas possunt esse occasio tam prelatis quam aliis ad peccandum superbia, avaricia, atque gula, et possunt esse occasio ad tam sibi quam ecclesie promerendum: et nisi assint gracia et virtus primus effectus contigit communius quam secundus. 15 Ideo videamus dispositionem * quam Christus adhibuit ad B. 9 d. consequendum graciam et virtutes; et vel oportet concedere quod Christus fuit fatuus, vel quod pauperies quam ipse disposuit plus disponit episcopos ad virtutes. Numquid credimus quod tales per castra sua caynitica possunt sub- vertere legem dei et facere hic manentem civitatem et pro*s- peritatem mundanam premium laboris et mercedem ultimam viatoris? Sed arguitur quod hoc officium pertineat sacerdoti quia Math. 6.^o et 8^o legitur quo modo Christus fecit suos apostolos de panibus et piscibus quos miraculose multiplicaverat populo ministrare; ergo licet nostris episcopis habere ultra vite necessaria ad pauperibus parciendum. Sed hic concedi debet conclusio cum episcopi debent esse hospitales secundum apostolum. Sed iste locus simealis a simili videtur pocius concludere quod ipsi debent in persona propria ministrare egentibus regis elemosinas eis datas. Sed ex isto non sequitur quod thesaursare debent vel perdere regis elemosinas pauperibus parciendas. Nec sequitur ex isto quod possunt per diem vel septimanam et multo magis per centum annos elemosinas totidem domini conservare. Et claret in facto quod nec manibus propriis ministrant egenis fideliter ista bona, nec per ministros ipsa faciunt fideliter ministrare, quia deus scit si voluntati sue eterne sit contrarium ut sic fiat. Let lords leave clergy to their proper work, and not rack tenants to endow a covenant of the devil.

The unfaithful ministry of the clergy would justify the confiscation of their revenues, according to the precedent of an English king.

The king should obey Christ, and confiscate their goods, and the clergy show reason against it, if they can.

The secular arm is not strong enough to force the clergy to give up their dominions, and the Pope is sworn to maintain them.

The Pope, too, has the power of conferring kings (e.g. Ireland on Henry II. and Spain on Henry of Trastamara), which no one could better exercise.

sui dominii confert regna,—sic enim fertur regi anglie dedisse hiberniam et degradato uno rege hispanie alteri regi dedisse hispaniam. Quis ergo deponeret reges inhabiles et reges habiles induceret nisi papa, cum sit summus Christi vicarius et pertinet summo terreno officio hoc temptare? 5

If the secular arm may disendow the clergy, a fortiori the clergy may disendow the secular lords, and this they should do.

Nec est faciliter fingenda racio quare licet mundanis principibus auferre mundana dominia sic a clero habitualiter delinquentे, quin per loco a majori licet spirituali brachio auferre secularia dominia a temporali brachio habitualiter delinquentे. Et tamen hoc contigit facilius et patet major 10 autoritas. Videtur quod docere debet pocius e converso quod clerici auferant totum seculare dominium a brachio seculari et reseruent ex integro ipsum sibi.

Ver. Answers.

A beginning might be made by the clergy preaching the true doctrine, and by the secular arm granting no new endowments, and not renewing old ones when they lapse.

Again, friars and priests might be bidden on their allegiance to declare whether endowment is agreeable to the divine law, or what is the substance in the Host.

VERITAS. Ista argucia non teneret nisi per locum a simili similitudine et autoritate diaboli, ac si diabolus vellet des- 15 truere totam autoritatem ordinis Christiani, extollendo papam super omnes principes Christianos. Concedo ergo, cum cederet ad radicalem pacificacionem ecclesie, quod omnes tres ejus partes debent ad istam ordinacionem domini cum prudencia laborare: clerus monendo per evidencias fidei 20 scripture ne cadat in heresim ex consensu; seculare brachium mortificacionem de cetero precavendo, et cum mortificacio in manus suas venerit, quod sepe contingit regi anglie, replicacionem peccati cleri contra dominum subtrahendo.

Multe autem sunt particulares prudencie ex quibus ista pre- 25 varicacio tolli poterit paulatice, ut dicendo fratribus et cunctis sacerdotibus regni anglie quod sub pena legalitatis sue dicant regi et regno si ista dotacio sit consona legi divine. Vel aliter quod sub pena equivalente dicant regi et regno, ex efficaci autoritate scripture vel ratione, quid in natura 30 sua sit ipsa hostia consecrata. Tales autem sunt multi casus necessarii ad noticiam fidelis regni in quibus pater mendacii antichristum et omnes suos clericos usque hodie excecauit. Quesito autem a clero nostro publice sub eadem pena si status paupertatis honeste quem Christus docuit in verbo et 35 opere sit perfecior et consonancior militanti ecclesie quam

Sed fidelis servus Christi negaret talem arguciam, de ordinacione domini contentatus. Sed diabolus presumit quod Christus male in hoc ordinavit, cum esse debuit e converso, et sic locus a simiali similitudine qua sic arguitur: si seculare brachium 5 accipere debuit a clero suum dominum quod dominus sibi dedit, ergo per idem sacerdotium accipere debet a seculari brachio seculare dominum quod diabolus usurpavit. Sic, inquam, arguens est nimis patens sophista diaboli; et sic potencia cleri cesarii, ex cautela diaboli super seculare bra- 10 chium invalescens, in penam peccati secularis brachii ita crevit. Ideo debet cum Christi prudencia temperari et sic cleri temporalis potencia debet cum dei sapientia mitigari.

The wicked folly begun by the English Constantine, may in God's ordinance be overthrown by the King of England.

Et sicut dicitur constantinum anglicum istam vesaniam dia- 15 bolicam presumpsisse, ita posset deus faciliter regem anglie et suum concilium ad destruccionem ejus prudentem cum spirituali juvamine ordinasse, et dare eis concilium sancti spiritus ut per medium apcius hoc attemptent. Sed satis est nobis detegere diabolicas argacias in oppositum fabricatas.

The disciples of Antichrist must be gradually brought to the true path.

Et sic si papa sit juratus ad oppositum est juratus cum 20 diabolo contra Christum, sicut accepcio medietatis imperii fuit ex cautela diaboli usurpata. Et si pape subdit, anti-christi discipuli, in isto sibi resisterent, ubi in causa Christi ad oppositum promoverent, sunt cum Christi prudencia paulative ad veritatis tramitem inclinandi. Et deus ordinavit 25 in isto tempore ad hoc media que diebus preteritis sunt mundo abscondita. Et quantum ad confirmacionem de facto papali dicunt quidam quod est maledicta usurpacio anti-christi. Ideo sicut regnum Anglie detinuit prudenter non-a- 30 gentas marcas in quibus illi inde annuatim se dicitur obli-gasse, sic cum prudencia poterit aliunde paci . . . amplius in nomine domini attemptare. Et sic quantum ad regnum hispanie . . . in isto presumpserit, non est aliud nisi quod diabolus ad tempus parva . . . ihm Christum. legem dei justissimam suo domino confiteri, et quod papa vel antichristus sic seculariter attemptat preter Christi licenciam contra reges, ipsi debent prudenter tirannidem istam diaboli declinare et ordinacionem domini suscitare. Christus Christ Himself gave tribute to Cæsar.

5 enim dedit humiliter tributum cesari et multipliciter ampliavit suum dominium, et non sibi vel suis apostolis aliquod tale dominium adquisivit. Et sic videtur papam non esse The Pope seems, therefore, to be not Christ's Vicar, but Anti-christ's.

10 cesarii obliviscendo hortacionis humilis et sancte predicationis Christi et suorum apostolorum usurpant potestative tirannidem antichristi, et in talibus prelatis specialiter ordinatis conversus est retrorsum et in suis filiis qui ipsos secuntur, dimittendo doctrinam Christi et sequendo vestigia 15 antichristi. Et patet ex dictis diversitatis racio in sequenti similitudine simiali; cum spirituale brachium sit vicarius humanitatis Christi ad paciem et humilitatem dispositus, et seculare brachium sit vicarius divinitatis Christi ad prudentem et mitem gladium vindicte rebellis populi inclinatus. Et sic 20 nec hoc contigit facilius nec ad hoc patet Christi autoritas, cum docuit oppositum tam in opere quam in verbis. Nec Christ must surely soon punish the clergy of Antichrist.

25 dubito quin oportet antichristi clericos in brevi tempore a domino castigari. Tales sunt multe antichristi argucie, quos facile est fidelem solvere, sancto spiritu per dona sua septiformia edocente.

VERITAS. Sed hic dicit fidelis constanter secundum doctrinam quam Christus docuit tam opere quam sermone quod clerus omnino debet vivere vitam pauperem et expropriatiam, tanquam heres regni celestis, propinquus vite innocencie, sicut Christus. Per hoc enim, quod clerus sic vivit 15 de parte domini, differt sensibiliter a domino seculari. Et quantum ad primum objectum patet quod vocando ecclesiam ipsam basilicam vel fideles illam incolentes in diebus festivis, sive regimen rectoris ipsum populum gubernantis, satis sensibiliter differunt ipsa ecclesia atque gleba. Nec 20 habet antichristus potentiam sic connectendi ista adinvicem quod unum non poterit ab alio separari, cum Christus et sui apostoli gesserunt curam excellencius quam nostri prepositi, licet caruerant tali gleba. Everyone should help by his prayers.

The secular lords can give most aid, and the clergy should stir them to this. The third order would rejoice both for temporal and spiritual reasons.

This matter shows who are Christ's disciples and who Anti-christ's.

The worldly among the clergy oppose the truth, and there are few on Christ's side to defend it. But God must defend His own in the end.

If the endowed clergy would renounce secular dominion, it would be a glorious triumph over the devil.

Lords must be warned not to be on the devil's side in this matter.

CAPITULUM 35^m.

The secular dominion of the clergy has gradually progressed, and is now regarded as sanctioned by God.

Cæsar was first persuaded that as he excelled other secular lords, so his priest, the Roman pontiff, should excel all other priests.

Hence arose the plea that the Pope should help Cæsar, borne down by the weight of dominion.

For did not the deacons help the apostles?

istas fraudulentas sophisticaciones dyaboli et agamus viriliter ad defensionem legis et restitucionem ordinacionis domini Jesu Christi, quia ex fide viantes non sufficient sibi ostendere hic plus amoris, et secundum apostolum anathema incurrit qui non amaverit dominum Jesum Christum. * Et B¹. 161 c. patet studenti solucio ad formam et materiam argumenti. * D. 78 b.

Secundo sic arguitur: illud quod transiit in preteritum non potest dirimi, cum secundum philosophos illo deus privatur de preterito facere non preteritum. Sed, ut testatur homo et carte regum et secularium dominorum, diu transit 10 in preteritum quod ecclesia fuerat sic dotata. Quis ergo vel deus illud preteritum dirimere potest? Per idem enim non facerent fidem carte de humanis redditibus, seculares domini de ruina sui dominii forent desolati. Et dicens quod non licet secularibus dominis istud concedere innuit quod 15 non sunt pleni domini bonorum que possident. Confirmatur tripliciter, primo per hoc quod magna carta regis testatur quod rex cum unanimi consensu regni sui concessit clero suo privilegium, ad cuius defensionem rex in principio sue corona- nacionis specialiter est iuratus, et excommunicaciones tam trans mare quam cis mare in omnes infringentes hoc pri- C. 26 a.

Ideo ergo foret privilegium illum destruere subvertere totam ecclesiam. Tercio confirmatur per hoc 25 quod papa, qui est caput universalis ecclesie, tam facto quam scripto confirmat multiplicititer istud factum.

unum predicamentum quod fit mensura omnium aliorum, attendamus fideliter ad hoc predicamentum, quod hoc dicit dominus vel ex lege sua, ergo hoc est insolubiliter * obser- D. 79 c. vandum. Sed quia consuetudines in isto deficiunt, ideo sunt nichil aut modicum a fidelibus ponderande. Erubescat 5 ergo maniacus occiduus in ista argucia: talis consuetudo in nostra contracta sine approbacione domini est confirmata, ergo est katholice observanda. Et per hoc patet responsio ad terciam arguciam factam de papa, supponendo ut fidem quod ipse peccare et errare poterit ut ceteri viatores. Sic 10 enim Christus ordinavit Petrum sic peccasse ante missionem spiritus sancti et post illam. Et credo quod nullus pro verecundia audebit dicere quod Petrus post tam sanctam vitam fuit magis peccabilis quam est papa. Si ergo genus cleri usque in adventum antichristi in deterius retrocedit, 15 evidens est multis, quod sit recens et plenissimus antichristus. Quis ergo timeret istam arguciam: Ipse sine ratione vel fundacione scripture sic asserit vel excommunicat, ergo est sue sentencie a cunctis fidelibus insistendum: cum sit argumentum topicum in quo racionabiliter contrarium concluditur? 20

(iii) As to the Pope, if Peter could sin, much more can he.

He is neither the head of the universal church, nor Peter's vicar, nor Christ's. Fideles ergo sibi propinquiores magis percipiunt istam sentenciam, et patet quod falsum assumitur, quod papa sit caput universalis ecclesie * vel Petri vicarius vel vicarius C. 27 b. Jesu Christi, sed inter omnes mortales ab illis maxime elongatur. Ideo in isto, sicud in aliis argumentis prioribus, adversarius 25 vel falsum assumit, vel in sequela deficit, vel silenter innuit nostram sentenciam esse veram. Quia aut, ut Averrois asserit, veritas testatur multipliciter sibi ipsi, et secundum fideles doctores de quanto veritas plus teritur, de tanto fidelibus plus redolescit. 30

Sed quis dubitat quin ista sentencia foret contraria rationi? Hic dictum est sepius, quod deo teste nisi evidencia scripture, quantum concipimus, moveret directe pro illa sentencia, nunquam laboraremus incurrendo tantam indignacionem a multis et maioribus tam intente. Et quicunque vivax sagittam talem proiecerit, ipsa est cum humilitate et reverencia admittenda, quia, ut sepe protestatum est, quicunque, eciam dyabolus, allegaverit fideliter fidem scripture pro sua sentencia, acceptarem illam humiliter pro auctoritate. Et 5 quantum ad rationem factam, dictum est superius, ut a quibusdam didici, sicut scriptura sacra est verissima, sic est compendiosissima et utilissima et miro modo sicut includit in se sciencias trivias et sermocinales, scilicet gramaticam, logicam, et rhetoricam, sic includit sciencias quadrivias reales 10 scilicet arismetricalm, musicam, geometricam et astronomiam, de quanto illarum noticia expedit ad beatitudinem

Scripture contains in itself all knowledge (even of the sciences) helpful to salvation.

Its rule as to the way clergy are to live involves a rule as to their number, which their great revenues now make excessive.

Et sic mirabili compendiositate autor scriptura, docens quomodo et de quibus clerici debent vivere, docet sufficenter in quo numero et qua proporcione debent 15 ad residuum populi se habere. Si enim non haberent redditus, vel ad officium quod pertinet clero Christi, non forent in tanto numero et tam onerosi ecclesie ut sunt modo. Ideo peccatum ecclesie exigit ut dotent illos et ditent contra legem dominicam, ut tot discolis oneretur. Servet igitur 20 duplex pars ecclesie legem Christi in cleri dotacione et erit in suo numero mensurato. Et patet quod adversarius legis dei defecit in ista tercia ratione, quia sicud clerus proporcione debita sincere sequens Christum prodesset ecclesie,

Other false arguments—(i) the priests held the cities of refuge and pasture for their cattle.
(ii) the Maccabean priests were more splendid than kings.

Answer—(i) the priests had charge of the cities of refuge, but not as lords.

Priests have not performed the old sacrifices to perform, hence do not need so large a provision.

(ii) As to the Maccabees, when the kingdom was destroyed the priests degenerated from pride till at last they killed Christ, as the pope and his satellites are threatening to kill earthly kings.

Alio vero sunt raciones stultorum que militant contra caput proprium, ut in penthateuco legitur quod sacerdotes habuerunt civitates refugii et pascua pro suis bestiis nutriendis, quomodo ergo non haberent in lege gracie ampliora? Et idem confirmatur de sacerdotibus Machabeis qui in tempore suo fuerant plus incliti et plus regibus generosi. Ad istud dictum est diffuse alibi quod sacerdotes habuerunt pro tempore legis veteris possessiones moderatas, ut competebat suo statui. Quia absit fideli credere, quod deus ordinasset tantum numerum Levitarum pro occidendis bestiis et figuraliter ¹⁰ ymolandis, nisi daret eis necessaria ad hoc opus. De quatuor autem civitatibus refugii non lego quod fuerunt seculares domini aut quod redditus de fugitivis receperant, licet ille civitates fuerant illis ad ministerialem custodiam deputate. Et, cum idem sit deus nunc qui tunc, patet quod ¹⁵ [si] iam foret necessarium redire ad ymolacionem figuralem huius modi bestiarum, deus ordinaret illis necessaria ad hoc opus. Sed Christus, qui est agnus dei, finiens has * figuras, ^{D. 80 d.} resurgens a mortuis iam non moritur, ideo racio fideles * necessitat quod cessent media necessaria ad hoc opus. ^{C. 29 a.} Fundent sacerdotes nostri, si poterint, quod debent modo intendere labori tali importabili figurali, et tunc possunt de lege domini ad hoc opus necessaria vendicare. Et * quan- ^{B¹. 162 d.} tum ad Machabeos proporcionabiliter creditur, quod extincta regalia, secundum Ieremie vaticinium, sacerdotes illi a lege ²⁵ domini ex superbia declinarunt, et sic crevit eorum malicia quousque occiderant Christum. Et utinam papa cum satelitibus non faciat proporcionabile regibus terre; modo fertur enim quod subpedavit Cesarem, et minatur multa media per que destrueret alios reges terre, ac si intenderet ³⁰ suscitare falsam promissionem dyaboli, quam promisit Christo se dare omnia regna mundi, si cadens ipsum adoraverit. Sed deus conservet secundum regulam ordinacionis sue ecclesie militanti hec pauca pro Christo dixerim, paratus (si oporteat) revocare facta, ratione istud non esse ³⁵ katholicum declarante. Sed communiter ad istud obiectum quadruplicem sunt quatuor responsiones facte a patre mendacii. Prima fingit, quod si hunc dimittis, non eris amicus Cesaris, quia tanta connexio est inter glebam et ius patronatus, quia ipsa perdita periret ius patronatus. Et per idem quocunque redditu in manum mortuam illud auferens perderet totum suum dominium. Sed ista signa falsa non extollerent fideles a practica legis dei. Scimus quidem, quod ius est res spiritualis independens a terra, in tantum ergo quomodo illa terra destruta fuerit vel consumpta ius

Four further objections—
(i) With the glebe would go the right of patronage, and so the secular power would lose.

- D. 81 a. stabit penitus inconcussum. Ideo sicud * ius papale propter talem contricionem non leditur, sic nec ius domini secularis. Caveat tamen ne expetat de illo patronatu lucrum temporale cum mixto titulo symonie, quia tale ius foret sibi in scandala.
- 15 lum. Secunda responsio fingit quod quecunque allegata de lege veteri non concludunt, cum maior pars eorum et specialiter iam cessavit. Sed noscat istam responsonem, quomodo decalogus et lex de decimis fundatur in veteri testamento. Et Christus, summus legislator et optimus interpres eius possibilis, interpretatus est stricte, quod sacerdotes sui careant tali dominio. Tercia responsio fingit, quod deus intenderat ecclesiam suam tantum carere tali dominio in Iudea quia cognovit quod gens illa fuit indurati cordis. Sed hec falsa fictio imponit ceteris apostolis delictum notabile ex negligencia qui morati fuerant extra ipsam. Quarta responsio fingit, quod deus voluit legem strictam pauperiem, sed ipso mortuo, sepulcrum suum, ut propheta cecinit, fuit gloriosum. Sed constat quod lex Christi non sic constringitur loco vel tempore, cum manebit * perpetuo in bonis, per idem enim non possit fingere quod nulla lex dei vel hominum de observanciis humanis haberet notabilem periodum temporalis, ideo quod quatuor iste ficticie, [cum] carent rationis evidencia vel scripture, sunt cum suis similibus propter periculum

Answer—right is a thing spiritual and cannot be affected by what may happen to a piece of land.

- 15 (ii) The Old Law is not binding—This is refuted by the existence of the Decalogue and of Tithes, and by Christ's teaching.
- 20 (iii) The rule of poverty only extended to Judea—Then the Apostles who taught out of Judea were negligent in not founding the other system.
- 25 (iv) Christ fulfilled the law of poverty, but only for His life—Christ's law is not thus limited by time and space.
